BY PHILIP RIDLEY

Three members of a right-wing political party have arranged to meet in a derelict flat in an abandoned tower block. Joined by numerous others, they all have stories to tell – both real and imagined. The play touches on issues of far-right extremism, racism and homophobia, but its underlying theme is story-telling – the stories that we tell ourselves and each other, and how we use stories to make sense of who we are and why we are here.

BY MARTIN MCDONAGH

In his small pub in Oldham in the mid 1960s, Harry is something of a local celebrity. But what's the second-best hangman in England to do on the day they've abolished hanging? Amongst the cub reporters and sycophantic pub regulars, dying to hear Harry's reaction to the news, a peculiar stranger lurks, with a very different motive for his visit. This is a dark comedy about vengeance with the top-notch twists, violence and laughs we have come to expect from the writer of many very successful plays and films.
